A YEAR AT

THE VALLEY

LEBANON VALLEY COLLEGE
FOUNDED 1866

What have we here, another year!

Life at Valley can be tough. Frustration and disgust are often the only rewards for long hours of effort.

Academics and heavy course loads, the work, shaft profs, the boredom of practicing; being in competition with everyone else; the desperation of never having enough time. And hanging over each student, as if it were the only index of his human worth: the CUM.

LVC, the Jewel of Annville

Valley students are never at a loss for things to do on or off campus. For easy talk and a beer, there's always Rich's, and of course Valley men are often found at the gym, Silver, Vickroy, Green . . .

FROM THE BEGINNING, FRIENDSHIPS BETWEEN the Vietnamese and students came easily.

It's Time for Class . . . Again

There are two types of lectures at Valley: bad and worse — unless you are one of the lucky ones that have an interesting speaker. Naturally, the attitude of the student is proportional to the effectiveness of the professor.

Some professors have attempted new ways of presenting the basics of a course, and the others, well . . . the others always will be the same.

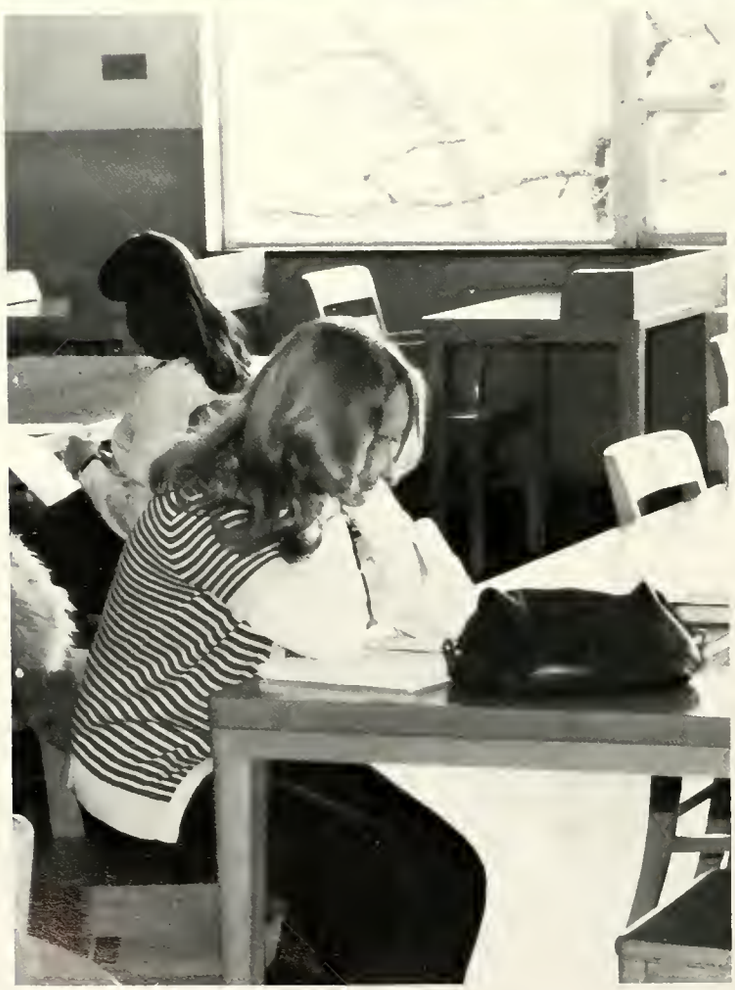
What goes down, must come up

All Valley students must inevitably face the food. In their pursuit of nourishment, they journey toward the Center. Some students rush energetically while others, the more intelligent ones, approach with more caution. Regardless, they face head waiters . . . cold eggs . . . warm milk . . . dirty silverware . . . jello, again? . . . stale bread . . . grease . . . train wreck and mystery meat . . . and "a wide variety of delicious food."

Music Man . . .

All the ingredients for great musical success were there: fine dancing, and singing, beautiful costumes, good sets, and, not least of all, astute direction.



Time to cram or time to "cram it."

Valley students quickly learn that studying is a fact of life. It is essential for success and even survival at Valley. Consequently, Gossard Memorial is a hot spot Sunday thru Thursday; students labor there for hours over textbooks preparing for the "big" test. However when the monotony and confinement of indoor studying becomes a grind, the Valley student likes to pack it up and head outdoors where he can get some fresh air and pretend to study. But no matter how much studying is or is not done, there are always a few minutes for cramming.

DORM RESIDENTS PRACTICE CREATIVE LIVING

Dorm living is one of the many curses of college life fabled to be a valuable experience. If learning to share a bathroom with 20 strangers is important, then maybe it is such an experience. However, there are those unforgettable times such as midnight obscenity wars between rooms, the monthly fire drills, water battles, kegs in the bathroom, and of course co-ed slumber parties.

Dorm living — a unique experience.

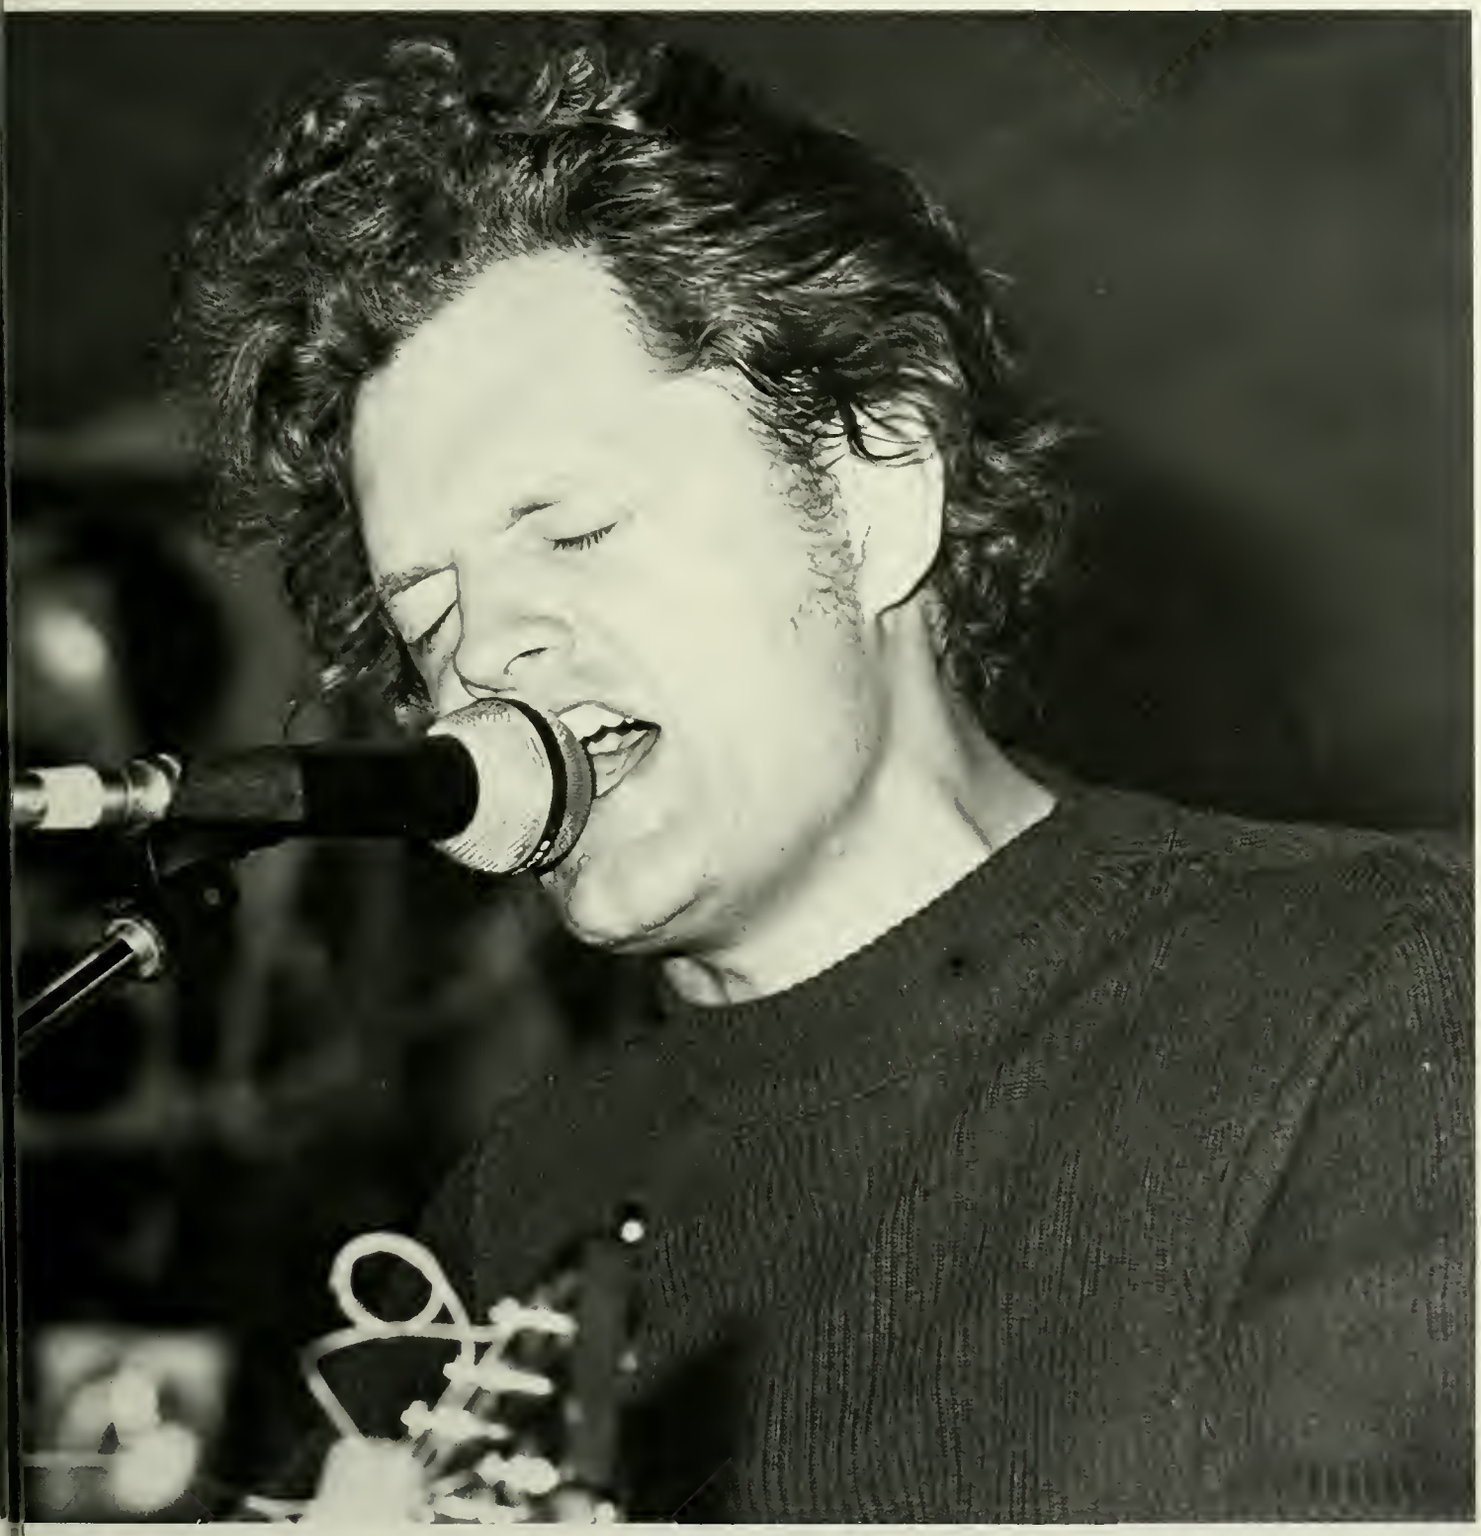
Registration

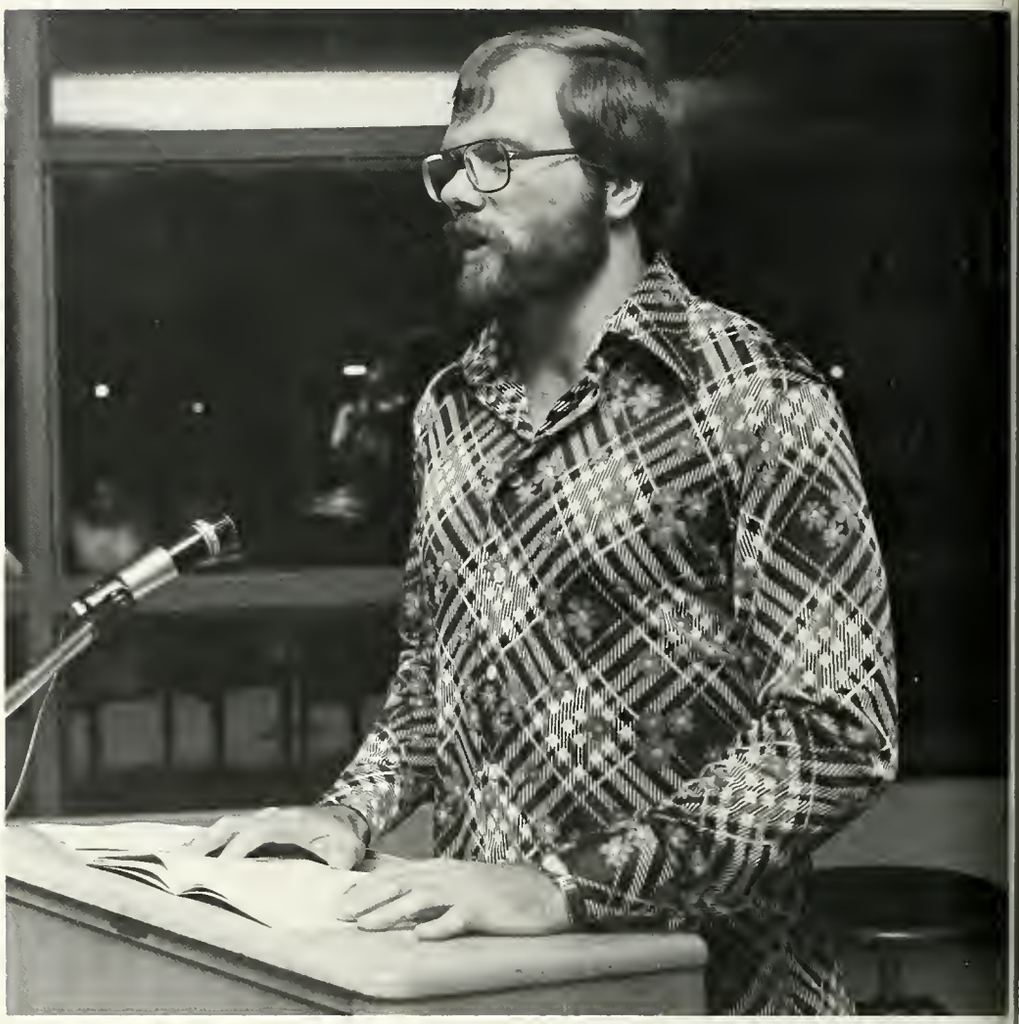
Registration day is the first test of the patience and endurance of the Valley student. Usually cursed by endless mountains of paperwork, registration is often complicated by incomplete schedules and uncooperative advisors.

Best known for endless lines, closed out courses, and massive frustration, registration is often seen as a forecast of things to come.

Harry Chapin — you are well worth it!

Walking into a room stuffed with a tense, angry audience 1 hour late, many a performer just wouldn't try. But Chapin cared — cared enough to play for 2½ hours straight without a break. He sang his heart out, using every muscle and goblet of perspiration to touch our hearts and our minds. It was nice to be at a concert with no drunk sitting behind you singing along, and 6 friends sitting before you singing, "Come on!" Thanks Harry.





Even kids at the Valley can be cultured!

Whether it be through chapel convocations with Ashley Montagu or Hans Morgenthau, faculty poetry readings, or even presentations of PDQ Bach, culture touches the lives of the Valley student.

YOU'VE GOTTA HAVE ART

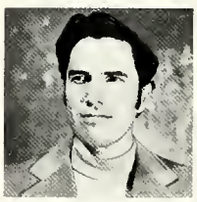
The Lebanon Valley College art program offers students a number of courses concerned with art appreciation and the all time favorite, art history, as well as a course in comprehensive studio drawing and painting, including introduction to print making. The art program also serves the college by bringing the works of professional artists to the campus. Each year the staff arranges at least nine one-man shows of professional caliber in addition to the juried art show of the LVC Spring Arts Festival. The staff also sponsors an annual day-long exhibit and sale of original graphic art from a well-known Eastern art gallery.

R. Iskowitz

I HATE BIOLOGY

On the upper level of old Science Hall many students may be found, isolated from the rest of the world. These biology students spend endless hours in the laboratory peering into the microscope and dissecting various species of organisms. Quizzes at 8 am and labs till five contribute to the busy schedule of those who study the science of life. Genetics, ecology, and histology are among the many courses available to the biology major. Learning is enhanced by trips, field studies, and independent research. After four years of labs, lectures, and exams, the biologist is prepared to tackle his new chosen career.

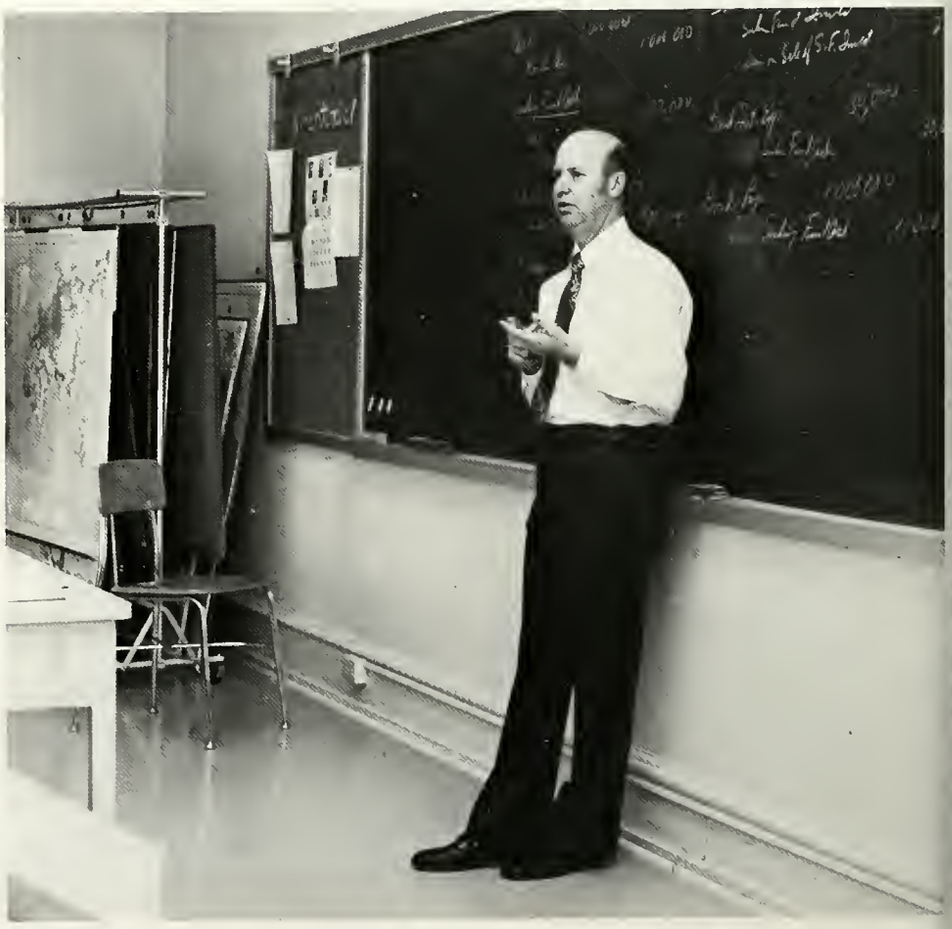
P. Wolf, J. Argot, D. Gring, A. Henninger, S. Verhoek, S. Williams, A. Wolfe



CHEMISTS HAVE SOLUTIONS

The sound of broken glassware, the detection of strong odors, and the frustration one gets from instruments which do not work are among the memories which the students in the chemistry department at LVC will certainly retain. Opportunities are available for all students to do laboratory work and library research in conjunction with their specified courses. During the summer, the department conducts an extensive research program which provides additional experience in the various fields of chemistry for the chemistry majors. Lebanon Valley's Student Affiliate Chapter of the American Chemical Society enables chemistry students to supplement their formal chemical education through field trips to industries, the presentation of speakers and films, and participation in student conventions.

H. Neidig, K. Lockwood, D. Bailey, R. Bell, J. Spencer, O. Moe



ECONOMICS AND BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION

The economics and business administration department is the second largest department at Lebanon Valley. The department offers three areas of concentration: economics, business administration, and accounting. Students are offered the opportunity to engage in special study and research relating to their own interest under the direction of the departmental staff. In an effort to balance theories explained in the classroom with practical experience, field trips are taken to the financial and business centers in New York City and Philadelphia, and government agencies in Washington, D.C.. The department also hosts lectures which features distinguished guests and discussion of topics of current interest. Due to the loss of Dr. Buffenmyer, Dr. Warner, and Mr. O'Neill at the end of the 75-76 year, the future of the department is uncertain. These faculty will be missed.

J. Buffenmyer, C. Tom, J. O'Neill, W. Warner, R. Knight

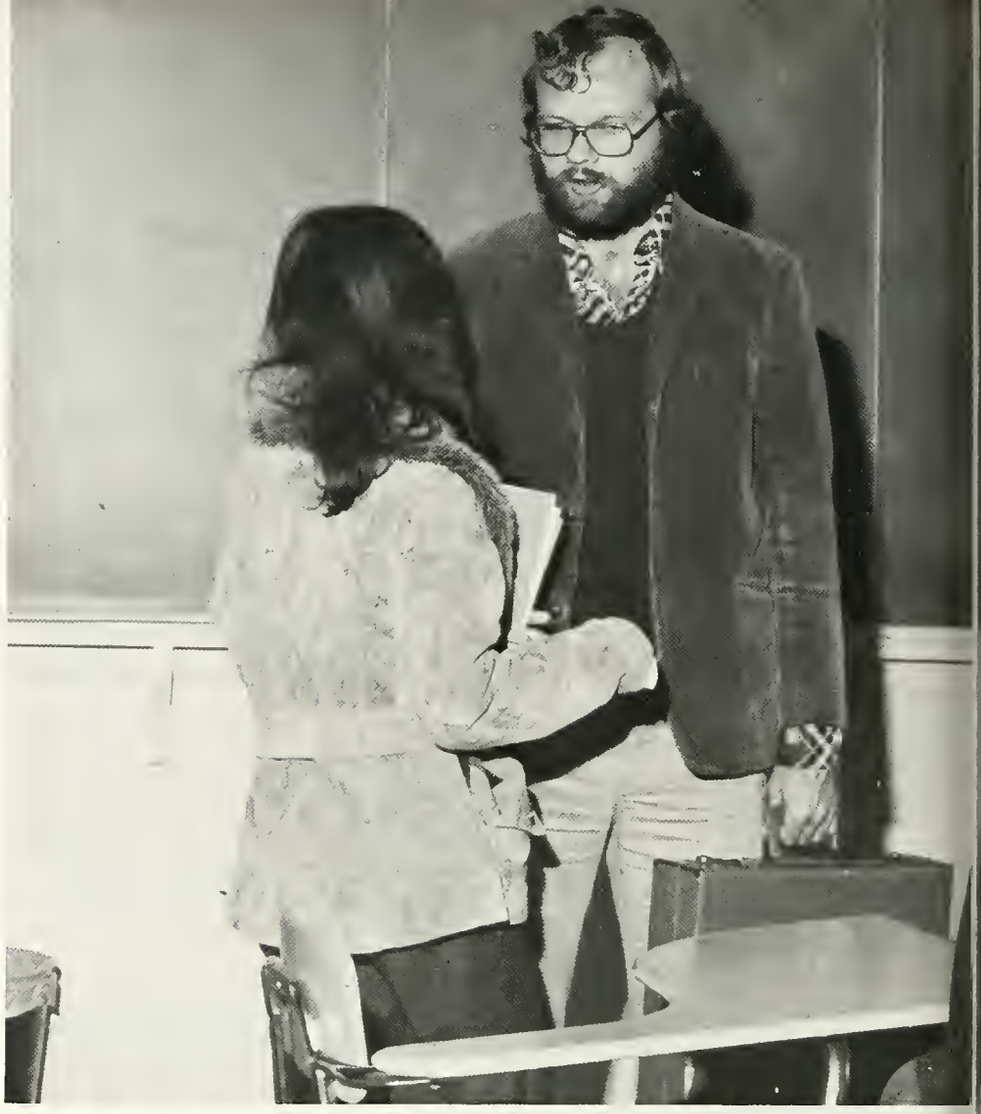
EDUCATION

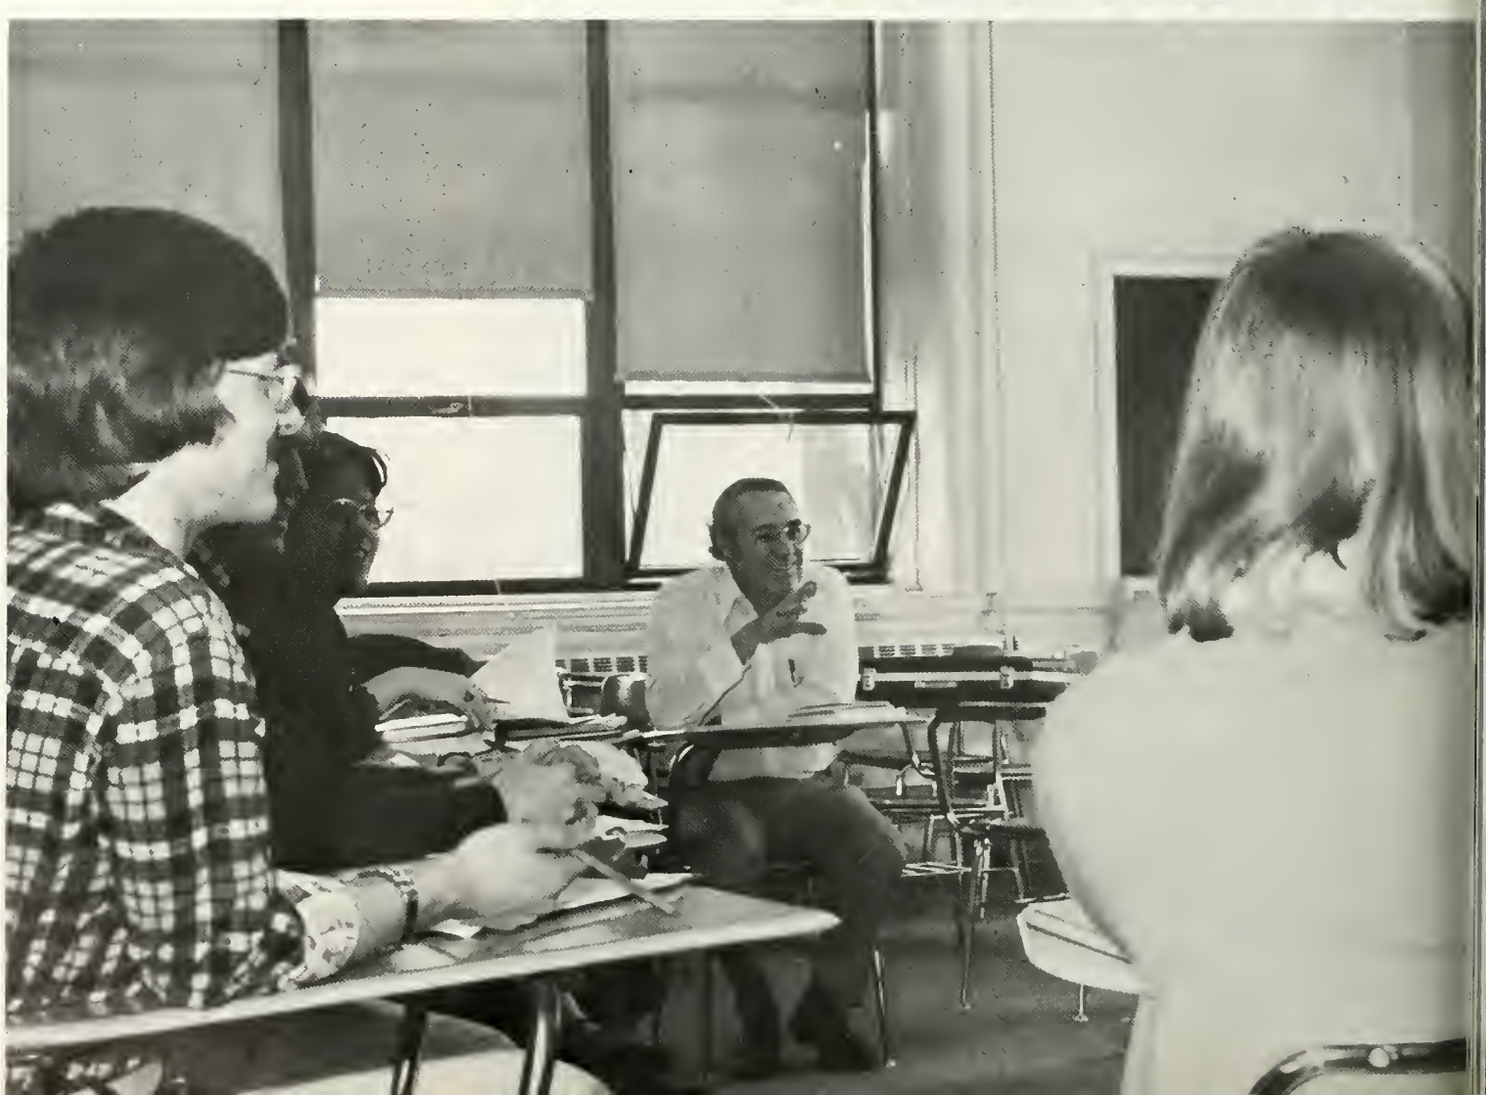
The department believes that four years of classroom experience in increasing degrees of responsibility is more valuable than just one semester of student teaching in the senior year. Students take professional courses and visit local schools to assist the regular teacher in the classroom. This is true for those majoring in elementary education. Those who wish to teach in the secondary schools must complete the necessary requirements for the degree in their major fields, while also meeting the necessary course requirements in the Department of Education.

C. Ebersole, J. Herr, M. Albrecht, S. Rogers, L. Jacques

ENGLISH

English majors at Valley face a survey of American, English, and world literature, as well as the favorite courses of Chaucer and Shakespeare. Elective courses may be taken in creative writing, literary criticism, speech, theatre, special problems, and literary history. Every freshman though must endure the first semester's English compositions and the second semester's reading assignments and term paper. This year Mr. Woods also taught an English for the Vietnamese students at Valley.





A. Ford, G. Struble, A. O'Donnell,
P. Billings, J. Kearney, R. Kirby,
L. Markowicz, G. Woods.

FOREIGN LANGUAGE

The department and students of Russian deeply miss Mama Hansen. Her death was a terrible blow to many. A new Russian instructor has taken over the teaching position. Replacements for assistant professors McNearney and Martin have also been secured. Lebanon Valley's language laboratory emphasizes conversations and exercises to develop a student's ability to understand and speak the language being studied. In addition to tapes for general language learning, the department maintains records and tapes of music, poetry, and drama for use in advanced literature courses and library holdings in the literature of the different countries. Foreign language majors are encouraged to spend the junior year, or at least one of two summers, in study abroad.

C. Cooper, E. Piel, H. Damus, R. Nowicki, K. McNearney, J. Martin

LIBRARY

Who will win, the Dewey decimal system or the Library of Congress? Every LVC student has run into the problem of finding a book catalogued using both systems. Such a mess! But Gossard Memorial Library is still a haven for those who desire solitude to study and for those listening to recordings for music history class.

W. Hough

MATHE-MATICS

During the first two years, all students in the department study Analysis, Foundations in Mathematics, Computer Science, and Differential Equations. The last two years are filled with other math courses and extensive computer use. The math program also includes actuarial science. An actuary is trained to apply mathematical techniques to all forms of insurance, particularly those that depend upon the contingencies of life and health. The actuarial science major takes courses in accounting and economics along with his specified math curriculum.

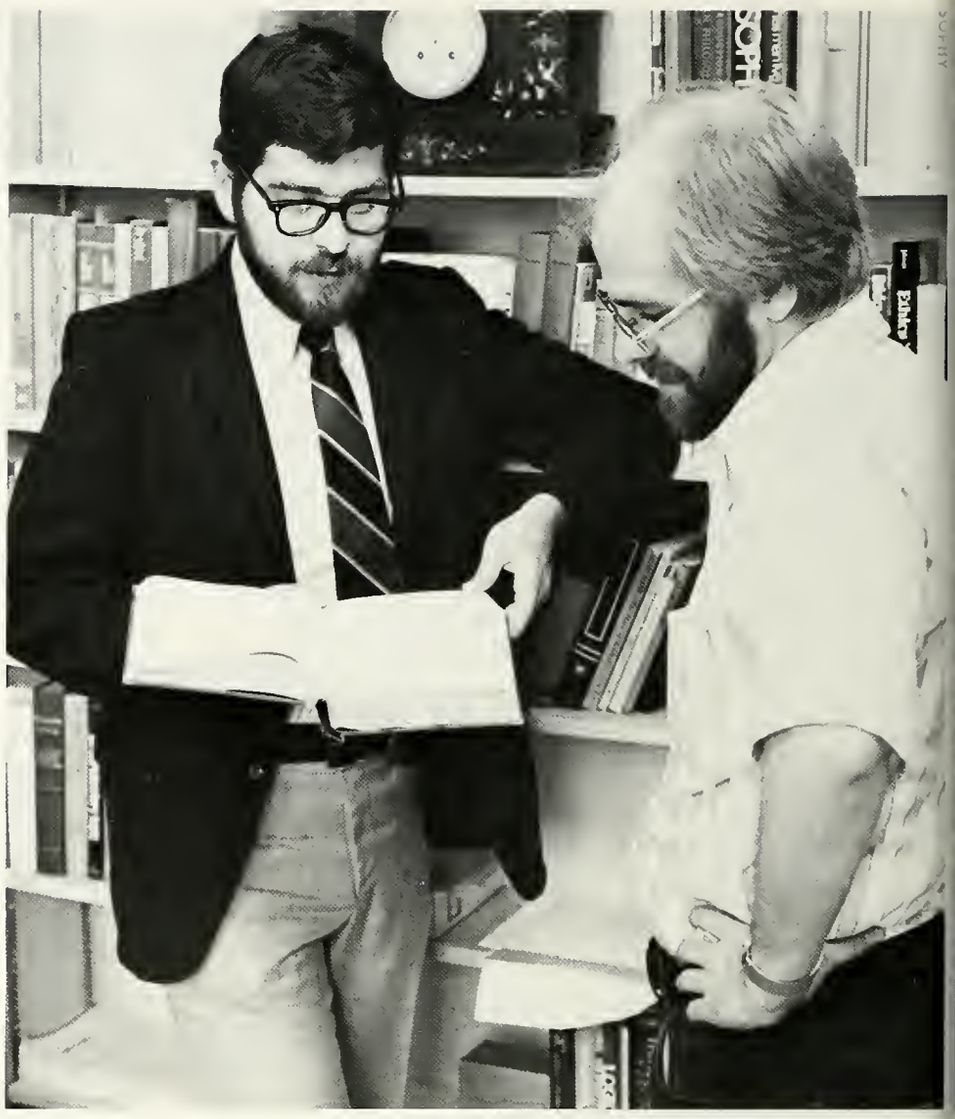
MUSIC: A DEPARTMENT TO BE NOTED

Blair Music Center provides a second home for the many students of music and music education at Lebanon Valley. One credit courses and no credit requirements plague the students in the department, but the long hours of practice, study, and patience have their reward. The musicians attain the training necessary to teach music or to perform in the world into which they will enter after leaving the Valley.

R. Burrichter, V. Englebright, R. Lau, V. Wilkins, J. Ogg

PHILOSOPHY

The department of Philosophy at Lebanon Valley College provides a sound foundation for further studies in a number of areas, including law and theology, as well as graduate work in philosophy itself. The curriculum of the department is designed to make the student aware of the need for a critical evaluation and analysis of the ideas, beliefs, and faiths — scientific and humanistic — within the Western intellectual tradition. Students are encouraged to develop a searching and critical attitude toward all questions and issues, and courses are taught in such a way as to facilitate the establishment of this attitude.



W. Thompson, J. Heffner

PHYSICS

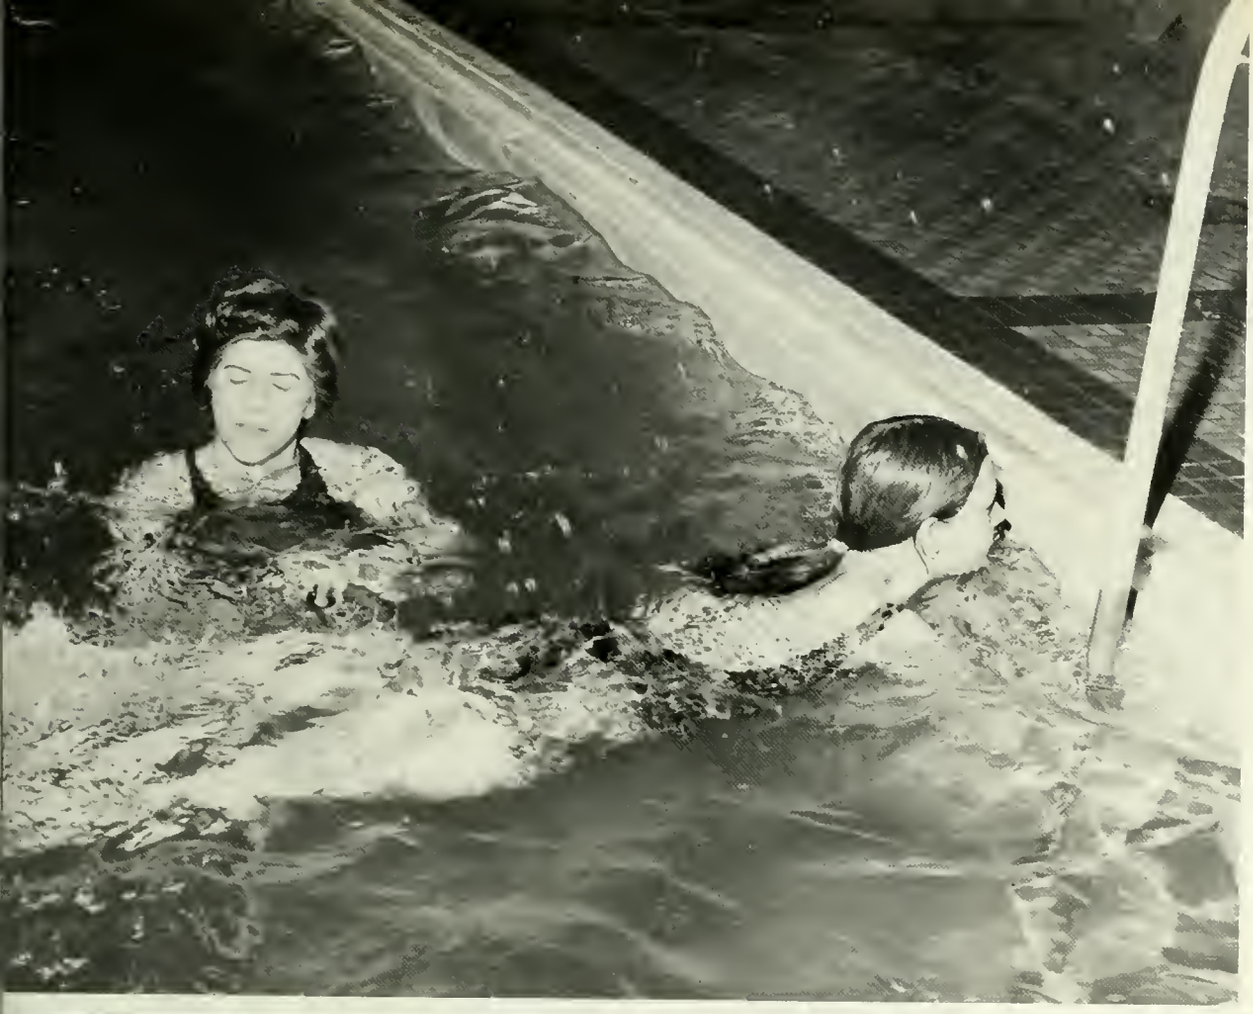
Physics, Fizix, Fizicks — any way you spell it you still get the science which deals with matter and energy. The beginning physics curriculum covers work with fundamental laws of physics, both classical and modern, including laboratory work. Other courses include the study of electricity and magnetism, analytical mechanics, modern quantum physics, and many others. Courses in mathematics and chemistry are essential for a physics major also.

J. Rhodes, S. Grimm, R. O'Donnell, R. Thompson

PHYSICAL EDUCATION

The aims of the department are to encourage attitudes and habits of good health, to develop the student's physical capacities, and to provide activities which will enrich leisure throughout one's life. Basketball, volleyball, soccer, paddleball, archery, swimming, and many other activities are offered.

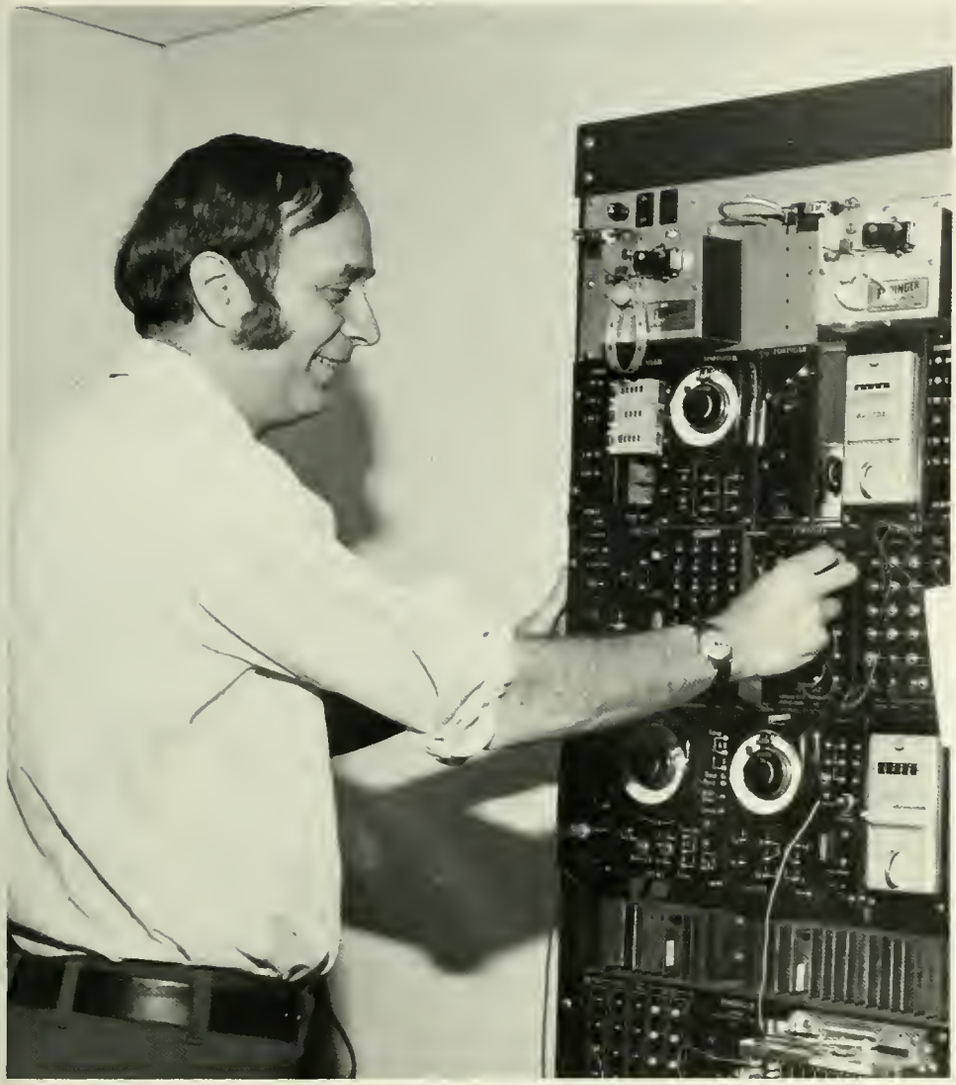
G. Petrofes, O. Reed, B. Correll, R. Yuhas, F. Satalin



HISTORY AND POLITICAL SCIENCE

A history major at Lebanon Valley will certainly remember all those European and American history courses. Courses of the history of Africa, Latin America, Russia, and the Far East are also offered. Field trips to museums and historic sites increase the student's awareness of history. In addition to his studies of government and political theory, the political science major is required to take courses in history. The political science and social science majors also spend one semester at Washington's American University where they observe government firsthand.

E. Geffen, A. Fehr, R. Joyce, J. Norton



PSYCHOLOGY

The psychology program is designed to be a fundamental part of a liberal education, a part which can further one's understanding and appreciation of man. It can prepare students for a career in human services and for graduate work leading to a professional degree in psychology. There are three areas of specialization for the psychology major. One emphasizes scientific research; the second is composed of studies in personality theory, abnormal behavior, and social and clinical psychology; and the third includes the psychology of childhood and development and educational psychology.

R. Davidon, J. Love, D. Lasky, R. Carlson

RELIGION

The religion department offers courses which introduce the student to the various historical and contemporary expressions of the Christian heritage as well as those which acquaint him with the diverse religious traditions of mankind. The entire curriculum is designed to give students insight into the meaning of man's religious experience. Students use field trips, audio-visual resources, and student-designed independent study projects to extend their knowledge. Religion majors also gather for discussions on topics of Biblical, theological, ethical or cultural interest.

L. Wethington, D. Byrne, V. Cantrell, J. Bemesderfer

SOCIOLOGY

The department seeks to promote three main goals. The first is to develop the student's understanding of the social structure and the social relationships in and through which man functions. The second is to provide preliminary training for those who are planning to enter the fields of social, religious, and community work. The third is to furnish basic background knowledge for the pursuit of graduate work in sociology. The new and enthusiastic instruction of Dr. Welch has given the department a new flair.

2nd Row — Coach Satalin, S. Smith, M. Daveler, T. Hazard, R. Sculley, J. Ritchey, D. Buesing, Kathy Locke, Coach Loftus.

This year's team was Patience in practice, Faith in a new coach, and Hope in each new game. The team worked together as brothers, each trying to do their very best. Though the season ended disappointingly sincere pride and recognition is still felt by fans for the team. Individual talents stood out, particularly when Jim Schock surpassed the 1000 point mark in his college career.

The editor of a yearbook usually makes some sort of comment on the last page and I shall be no different. The 1976 QUITTIE got off to a very late start, owing to the fact that there was no staff. However, once this was known to the Class of 1977, a staff was formed and work was begun.

I wish to express my gratitude to Mr. and Mrs. J. Monteith who bailed this novice crew out of many crises with pictures.

My thanks also to Mr. Ed Patrick our yearbook representative who gave us motivation, guidance, and enthusiasm, along with teaching us most of what we know about putting a yearbook together.

But to my staff, Jeanie, Sheila, Eric, Nina, Linda, Sherry, and LuAnn, my deepest thanks. This staff was dedicated, hard working, and above all wanted a yearbook that Lebanon Valley could be proud of. Together we made this the best book we could and hopefully a good reflection of Lebanon Valley College. I feel the job these people did was great. I'm proud and pleased to say that I have been the editor. I hope that you have enjoyed this, our labor of love, the 1976 QUITTIE.
